Attorney General Boomed For Post as Chief Justice Announces He Will Retire at End of Current Term.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Charles Evans Hughes, the eleventh man in history to serve as chief justice of the United States, will relinquish his high office on July 1 and retire to private life because of "considerations of health and age."

The decision of the 79-year-old jurist to retire marks the end of supreme court service that has covered 19 years and closes a career in public life that has been unusually varied and distinguished.

As soon as the chief justice's intention to retire became known, speculation here fastened on the question of his successor. Informed sources freely and almost unanimously predicted that Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, a leading administration figure, would be President Roosevelt's choice.

By filling this vacancy and an earlier one that has existed since the retirement of Justice James C. McReynolds last Feb. 1, President Roosevelt will have named seven of the nine members of the tribunal. Senator Byrnes (D. S. C.) is expected to be the other appointee.

MORE RAIN DUE

Weatherman Says Showers To Continue In County.

Mansfield and Richland county continued to get its much-needed rain today as the weatherman promised intermittent showers for this afternoon and night. Occasional light showers are also predicted for tomorrow.

The rains put a damper on the temperature, bringing the mercury down from a high 80 degrees to only 61. Average for the day was 70.5 degrees. At noon, the temperature was up to 65.

Up until the middle of May, farmers were alarmed by the lack of rainfall which threatend to destroy crops. For the last three weeks, however, showers started to fill cisterns and creeks which had nearly run dry.

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Here's another horse laugh on Bing Crosby whose stable has furnished more radio gags than race winners.

The horse, sold by the crooner to Erlanger stable, won a six-furlong sprint for California bred 3-year-olds by two lengths in 1:13. The payoff was $40.80 and $25.20.

Emergency Passage of Rate Bill Seen

7 MEMBERS IN FAVOR OF FAST ACTION ON BILL

Democratic Majority In City Council Gives Assurance of Favorable Vote.

DECISION UP TONIGHT

Speedy Action Urged To Make Light Rate Reduction Here Effective Next Month.

With a proposed electric rate ordinance already bearing the recommendation of council's utilities committee, leaders of council today moved to obtain emergency passage of the bill at tonight's regular June meeting.

Fred Miller, leader of the Democratic majority in council, said today he favored emergency passage of the ordinance, and added that he had obtained similar expressions from four of the other five Democrats in council. The fifth, George Berg, he had not been able to reach, he said.

Russell D. Porch, chairman of the utilities committee, which yesterday announced its unanimous recommendation for the rate bill, said Councilman C. N. Shultz had informed him he would favor emergency handling of the ordinance. He was unable to reach Councilman George Kyle, third Republican member, he said.

However, the seven who have expressed themselves would be sufficient to assure emergency passage of the measure.

Reason for the emergency move is to make reduced rates available as early as possible—the Ohio Public Service company had suggested a July 1 date, and state law requires that 30 days elapse between passage of a rate contract ordinance and its effective date.

Miller said that unless the bill was handled as an emergency, three months might elapse before the bill went into effect (if it were voted on at three subsequent regular meetings) and Mansfield consumers would stand to lose more than $15,000 in rate reductions.

A News-Journal survey also showed seven councilmen favoring emergency action. Unavailable were Kyle and Berg. Those who have indicated they would support

11 INJURED AS AUTOS CRASH

Greenwich Residents Hurt as Cars Meet at Intersection of Routes 13 and 224.

Eleven persons, including a one-year-old baby, were injured last night when two automobiles collided at the intersection of State Route 13 and U. S. Route 224, one mile east of Greenwich.

State highway patrolmen blamed the accident on the failure of one of the drivers to observe a stop sign.

Traveling south on Route 13, Frank Angeloni, 51, of Butler, Pa., failed to stop at the intersection with U. S. route 224 and crashed his car into another driven by Lee Albert Mills, 29, of Greenwich officers said.

It was the second accident at the intersection in two weeks. On May 18, Sam Contra, 20, was pinned beneath a tire truck and killed while James Kennedy, 18, and Joseph Marfia, 17, were injured. They were all from Mansfield.

Mills, who received shoulder and rib injuries, was driving with his wife Marjorie, 25, their two children and another four-year-old child. Mrs. Mills suffered a right shoulder injury and sons Robert, five, and Edward Albert, one, received cuts. Raymond Leroy was cut.

Angeloni was traveling with his wife, Mary, their three children and Dorothy DeRita, 29. All were from Butler, Pa. Angeloni was the only hospital case and the Willard hospital nurses described his condition as "satisfactory" this morning. Mrs. Angeloni suffered a fractured right collar bone and arm and knee abrasions. The children, Francis, 13, Cecilia, 12, and Donald, 10, were all bruised. Miss DeRita had a cut left shoulder.

The front of Angeloni's machine and the right side of Mill's car were badly damaged.

Mrs. Dickinson Gets One To 10 Years For Embezzlement

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — Overruling her motion for a new trial, Common Pleas Judge Cecil J. Randall today sentenced Mrs. Agnes B. Dickinson to one to 10 years in Marysville Women's reformatory for conviction on an embezzlement charge.

The court granted Mrs. Dickinson a 20-day stay of execution of sentence to give her time to file an appeal.

In recent years Mrs. Dickinson gained statewide notice for her litigation to protect state funds. She has pending a taxpayers' suit to recover for the state approximately $3,000,000, including penalties, allegedly overpaid for "hot mix" paving during the Davey administration.

On May 15, a jury in Franklin county common pleas court required only 55 minutes to find Mrs. Dickinson guilty on an indictment charging embezzlement of $10,800 from the guardianship estate of Mrs. Annie Burgy, an incompetent.

Although the courts previously had disbarred her as an attorney, Mrs. Dickinson was permitted to appear as her own defense counsel. She previously admitted converting the funds to her own use but contended the court had called on her "prematurely" to give an accounting.

She appeared in court again today when Judge Randall considered her new trial motion but offered no evidence to support it, whereupon Judge Randall overruled the motion and passed sentence.

Los Angeles Grand Jury Tables Mistreatment Investigation.

LOS ANGELES —(INS)— Refusing to believe assertions that improper parties had taken place at the home of Lionel Atwill, screen actor, the Los Angeles county grand jury today announced it had dropped its investigation into charges of mistreatment of Sylvia Hamalaine, 16-year-old Minnesota girl who came to Hollywood in search of film fame.

"The stories we heard in the jury room taxed our credulity, and unless some new evidence of a positive nature is developed the case will remain tabled," said Jury Foreman Theodore Pierce.

Atwill strongly denied the story of Virginia Lopez, dress designer, that the Hamalaine girl had been a guest at "improper" parties at his home.

Strain Grows as U. S. Refuses to 'Appease' Nippon To Get It Out of Axis.

By KINGSBURY SMITH
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Diplomatic quarters in Washington today believe the United States and Japan are about to enter a new period of increasingly strained relations as a result of the American government's refusal to engage in an appeasement move with the Nippon empire.

In the light of this situation, International News Service is able to present exclusively the current attitude of the American government toward Japan and

Max Schmeling Recovering From Sprained Ankle

BERLIN—(INS)—Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight boxing champion and now one of Germany's most famous parachute troopers, was recovering today from the effects of a sprained left ankle and heat stroke suffered while he was participating in the battle of Crete.

Refuting continued erroneous foreign reports that Max was killed in Crete, the official German radio carried an interview with Schmeling in which he told of his part in the crete attack.

Schmeling, broadcasting from room No. 60 in the hospital, declared:

"I fought for three days in Crete. It was a tough job.

"The British shot at us when we glided down to earth but we managed to land safely."

Mrs. Dickinson Gets One To 10 Years For Embezzlement

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS — Overruling her motion for a new trial, Common Pleas Judge Cecil J. Randall today sentenced Mrs. Agnes B. Dickinson to one to 10 years in Marysville Women's reformatory for conviction on an embezzlement charge.

The court granted Mrs. Dickinson a 20-day stay of execution of sentence to give her time to file an appeal.

In recent years Mrs. Dickinson gained statewide notice for her litigation to protect state funds. She has pending a taxpayers' suit to recover for the state approximately $3,000,000, including penalties, allegedly overpaid for "hot mix" paving during the Davey administration.

On May 15, a jury in Franklin county common pleas court required only 55 minutes to find Mrs. Dickinson guilty on an indictment charging embezzlement of $10,800 from the guardianship estate of Mrs. Annie Burgy, an incompetent.

Although the courts previously had disbarred her as an attorney, Mrs. Dickinson was permitted to appear as her own defense counsel. She previously admitted converting the funds to her own use but contended the court had called on her "prematurely" to give an accounting.

She appeared in court again today when Judge Randall considered her new trial motion but offered no evidence to support it, whereupon Judge Randall overruled the motion and passed sentence.

AXIS SPEEDING MEN TO SYRIA, NEW WAR PHASE

Tourists Cross Turkey, Desert Fighters Landed at Port; London Plans Action.

came ashore from steamers believed to have run the British blockade from the Italian Dodecanese islands, it was said.

At Latakia they are only 70 miles from Britain's big eastern Mediterranean island stronghold of Cyprus.

The soldiers were described as wearing tropical helmets and high boots like those of Lieut. Gen. Erwin Rommel's German North African corps.

From the little port the Germans were believed to have gone south along a coast road toward Beirut, capital of Lebanon, 100 miles away, it was said.

London Sees Early War Declaration

LONDON—(AP)—Qualified observers predicted today the war cabinet soon would declare Syria as enemy-occupied territory, opening the French-mandated wedge between Turkey and Palestine for full-scale British attack.

Reports from Turkey that the Nazis already had landed seaborne infantry with motorized equipment of the Syrian port of Latakia, just east of Britain's island of Cyprus, were interpreted in some quarters as indicating the race for positions on a new warfront already was on.

There were indications that British official circles would not be surprised if the Vichy government soon requested German "protection" of all French colonial possessions, including Syria and Lebanon in the middle east.

The Brenner Pass meeting of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini yesterday in a war-strategy session prompted almost unlimited speculation as to where the Axis would strike next.

Most guesses, however, involved the Suez Canal.

Many observers declared they were convinced the Axis leaders had decided on a drive across Cyprus and Syria to Iraq and Palestine in an effort to split Britain's middle east forces before touching off the actual Libyan thrust toward the canal.

"If Hitler can occupy Syria," one source declared, "it is very doubtful whether we shall find Cyprus defensible. And once the Nazis were firmly in control (in Syria) there would be no stopping the inflow of German material. Turkey then might grant a right of way and how long after that could we possible hope to hold Iraq and her oils?"

RAF Starts Fires In Raid On Berlin

LONDON — (AP) — Large fires were started in Berlin last night by a small force of British air raiders, the air ministry declared today.

Attacks also were made, a communique said, on the cities of Duesseldorf, Duisburg - Ruhrport and other targets in the industrial Ruhr, and on docks at Ostend and St Nazaire.

Four aircraft were lost in these raids, and three in daylight attacks on German objectives yesterday, the British acknowledged.

The air ministry news service said British bombers covered the whole length of Germany's vital Kiel canal "in search for enemy shipping"

One bomber was said to have dropped a half load on a 1,200-ton ship in the canal and then dived from 1,500 feet on a 3,500-ton ship, "firing his front guns all the time," and unloaded the rest of his bombs.

Says Mediterranean Days Are Numbered

BERLIN — (AP) — Britain's days in the Mediterranean are numbered, Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voeklishcher Boebachter, declared today, focusing attention sharply on the island of Cyprus as the next likely objective of Germany's armed forces.

Cyprus, the last British island stronghold in the eastern Mediterranean, serves as an advance base for naval and air units guarding approaches to Palestine and Suez.

So long as it remains under the Union Jack, observers pointed out, it constitutes a potential threat to any Axis ambitions for domination of the Mediterranean or the middle east.

These sources attached added significance to the Voeklischer Beobachter's prediction because it followed so closely on Hitler's unheralded meeting with Premier Mussolini yesterday in the Brenner Pass.

They also noted with interest the order of the day issued by Reichs Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering last night, in which he congratulated the air force on the conquest of Crete and said it had proved Hitler's assertion that "there are no unconquerable islands."

Talks between Axis chieftains always have been milestones on the road to important political and military developments, and it is safe to assume that their latest meeting will have "clarifying and decisive" results, these sources said.

Strain Grows as U. S. Refuses to 'Appease' Nippon To Get It Out of Axis.

the reasons why it has ignored the appeasement overtures from Tokyo.

These overtures have been made repeatedly from Tokyo in the form of suggestions that Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka should be invited to visit Washington to discuss a settlement of far eastern problems.

The American government believes Matsuoka's idea of a satisfactory settlement of far eastern problems would be for the United States to cease aiding China and agree to bring pressure to bear on Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to conclude a peace treaty with Tokyo recognizing Japan's predominance in Asia.

In return, it is thought Japan might agree to withdraw from the Axis alliance and assure the United States certain economic provileges in the far east.

The idea of such a settlement with Japan has been rejected by the American government for the following reasons:

1—Such appeasement of Japan could be made only at the expense of China and would represent a far eastern "Munich" pact;

2—It also would be in direct contradiction of the fundamental principles of America's present foreign policy, which are based on resistance to aggression; nonrecognition of territory acquired by force; peaceful settlement of international disputes; and equality of opportunity in commercial relations.

Refusal of this government to attempt to appease Japan does not, however, mean that war between the United States and the Nippon empire is necessarily inevitable, authoritative sources said. On the contrary, it is asserted the government is endeavoring, within the limits of its national policy, to avoid a conflict with Japan.

As evidence of this endeavor, informed quarters cite President Roosevelt's omission of Japan in his attack on the aggressors last week. The president's omission of Japan was, it is said, a deliberate effort to encourage the conservative Japanese elements to resist German pressure to drag the Nippon empire into the war in order to slow down American aid to Great Britain.

This consideration also is cited as one of the main reasons why the president refrained from disclosing the measures the navy may take to protect ships carrying American supplies on the high seas

The American government does not want to give Germany any opportunity to interpret American naval action as a hostile move calling for invocation of Japan's pledge to enter the war under the Axis alliance.

In line with this policy of giving Japan a chance to back out of the alliance, American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in Tokyo is taking advantage of every opportunity to warn the Japanese against the danger of backing the wrong horse in the present world struggle the measure were Democrats Miller, Lester Hunter, Jacob Kutchall, Harry Emmons and Arthur L. Croak. Republicans Shultz and Porch also favor it.

After 25-Ton Bomber Crashed In Bay

As an added spur for action at tonight's meeting, council will receive a resolution adopted by the trades promotion committee of the Junior Association of Commerce, and approved by the executive council of that organization.

The resolution will call for emergency passage of the rate ordinance, and an effort to have the rate take effect on July 1.

It will be presented by Martin Merschdorf, chairman of the trade expansion committee, and Giles Hamilton, secretary. The resolution points out the vital effect of lower electric rates on Mansfield business concerns, among them those manufacturing electrical appliances, on the cost of doing business by Mansfield business concerns and on the cost of living of all citizens, and emphasizes the loss to consumers in higher light bills if the ordinance is not passed.

If the measure passes, Mansfield rates will come in line with the lowest charged in any city served by the O. P. S., namely, Lorain, Sandusky and Elyria.

The proposed Mansfield rate is now in effect in the two first-named cities and goes into effect in Elyria July 1.

Reductions under the new schedule, which will be in effect for five years, will run from 2.7 to 77 cents a month for domestic consumers in Mansfield. The company has estimated savings to consumers of about $70,000 a year.

ministration's defense program measures.

"Under this bill," he told reporters, "the president could take over all the property in New York, Montana or any other state and convert the states into game preserves or bird refuges."

Wheeler foresaw "a major fight" on the legislation in the senate.

There was considerable general interest as to whether the broad powers might be invoked to end strikes hampering defense production. In the absence of any official statement on this point, some legislators were of the opinion that the bill would authorize the taking over of strike-bound plants.

In addition to permitting the president to take over for any period any type of property adaptable for use in national defense, the legislation also would authorize the chief executive to sell or otherwise dispose of the requisitioned property.

Senator Wheeler said he saw "no reason to give the president the right to take over either the real or personal property of citizens. "I doubt that Hitler or Mussolini have that much personal power.

"This measure is a direct threat to every individual in the United States. . . . At his whim, the president could take from the farmer his farm and farm machinery, from the laborer his tools and from the business man his factory

"He could take over the press and radio. . . . If the president gets this bill what is left of our so-called why of life? In order to fight for democracy abroad are we going to set up a totalitarian government here?"

JACKSON LEADS FOR COURT SEAT HUGHES VACATES

Chief Justice Retires at End of Current Term Because of 'Health and Age.'

which I have been discharging with increasing difficulty," the chief justice wrote to Mr. Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt answered by telegram from Hyde Park. The news, he said, came "as a great shock" because he had counted on the chief justice's continuing his "splendid service for many years to come."

"My every inclination," the president added, "is to beg you to remain; but my deep concern for your health and strength must be paramount."

Friends of the chief justice said he tired easily of late and was not able to perform the arduous duties of the high office with his usual ease.

The illness of Mrs. Hughes for the past few months also contributed to his decision to leave the bench, it was said unofficially. She has wanted him to devote his remaining days to relaxation and travel.

Chief Justice Hughes presided over the supreme court during one of the most turbulent periods of its history.

The controversy started early in the Roosevelt administration when the tribunal delivered a number of decisions overturning important New Deal legislation, such as the national industrial recovery act and the agricultural adjustment act.

Differences between the court and the administration reached a climax in 1937 when Mr. Roosevelt proposed to congress "new blood" be injected into the court by adding a member for each justice over 70 and 6 months of age who did not retire. The proposal precipitated a spectacular and acrimonious oratorical battle on Capitol Hill.

Hughes was widely credited with playing an important behind-the-scenes role in bringing about the ultimate defeat of the court reorganization plan.

Before he ascended the bench as chief justice in 1930, Hughes had had a full and brilliant life in public service.

An eminent lawyer, he served his native New York first in a series of special investigations, and later for two terms as governor.

President Taft named him associated justice of the supreme court in 1910, an office he resigned in 1916 to campaign as the Republican party's nominee for president of the United States Hughes lost to Woodrow Wilson by such a narrow margin that he went to bed one night thinking he had been safely elected, only to awaken a defeated candidate.

He was secretary of state in the Harding and Coolidge administrations. In this role, he electrified the world by proposing drastic disarmament to the 1921 Washington arms conference and ultimately won some of his recommendations.

In some of the best-known opinions written by the chief justice since he was appointed by President Hoover to succeed William Howard Taft, the court:

Sustained the constitutionality of the national labor relations act.

Called sit-down strikes "a high-handed proceeding without shadow of legal right."

Declared the NRA unconstitutional.

Sustained the administration's effort to pay payment of federal obligations in gold.

RELIEF COST HITS NEW LOW

Shelby Expenditures For Month of May Given at Only $425.

SHELBY — Relief expenditures hit a new low here last month with only $425 spent here for that purpose, figures in the monthly report released here today showed.

Expenditures for the first five months of this year totaled $3,444 as compared with $5,474 for the same period last year.

Relief officials attributed the decrease to the fact that an increase in private employment here during the past year has put every man able to work back into employment.

Relief expenses this month took a drop over last month because of the decrease in the fuel fund. Last month the fuel cost was up over the expenditure made this month because of the colder weather.

Items of interest in the report included the following expenditures: food, $157; rent, $32; electric, $12; gas, $11; clothers, $10; and hospital, $3.50.

Administrative costs of relief including the city physicians' salary totaled less than $200.

Twelve families including 45 persons and four single persons make up the relief rolls here. This makes a total of 49 persons on relief here in this city of a population of 6,700 persons.

Up to Council for Action

DESPITE what seemed to many an unseemly delay, the question of reducing light rates comes before city council tonight.

As was said here Sunday, in urging that it was high time that some action be taken on the matter, first presented March 26, there seems to be only one vital question involved:

Does Mansfield want lower domestic light rates for the next five years, in the face of increasing costs of all other kinds of commodities?

There have been rumors that the light rate proposal was being "kicked around" because of political considerations—which seems pointless in view of the fact that the reduction proposal came voluntarily from the Ohio Public Service company, and would have been made whether the administration had been Republican or Democratic and regardless of the political complexion of city council.

It is to be hoped that council will not delay nor debate more than is necessary. Already, it may be that the ordinance cannot become effective on the suggested date of July 1.

A delay of a month will cost Mansfield consumers an estimated $5,800. That would make fooling around unnecessarily expensive.

Defense 'Fire Drill'

THE whole nation can learn a lesson from the army "alert" of May 29 that seems to have alarmed a good many people and caused considerable tenseness at various places. Whether or not it was merely a practice measure, like a fire drill, or whether it was a genuine alert based on forewarning of threatened sabotage or fifth column activity anywhere, the lesson was the same.

Americans should be able to take such things in their stride and without getting the jitters or working up scary rumors. If there is no immediate peril, the practice in prevention is well worth while. If there is real danger, calmness and thoroughness are all the more necessary. In neither case is there either patriotism or safety in a case of nerves such as thousands of people worked up over the broadcast Wellesian invasion from Mars some time back.

The military forces directly involved in the recent alert appear to have done their job very well indeed. Their effective work gives assurance that malicious damage to defense works will not be widespread even if there are plans for attempting it.

The Science of Personnel

A NEW science is rapidly growing up in America, and a very practical one. It is the fitting of man-power into defense industry, and it may be as important at this stage as purely military defense, with which it is closely allied. It calls for the finding, training and placing of defense workers in industry, and it is under the direction, for the first time, of scientific men, particularly psychologists. They study men for special skills and aptitudes and see to their training and place them where they will be most useful.

This is not entirely a new phase, but it is being intensified and its importance newly realized. The army calls for employment offises to make surveys of men for military jobs as well as those wanted for industrial work. Men by tens of thousands are studied and analyzed to find what they can do best in every line of service, civil and military. As this proceeds, we may have for the first time millions of men, and also women, really trained for the varied needs of war and peace, instead of leaving it largely to chance.

A nation of free people, so trained, should be equal to any need.

The First Flyer

THERE are legendary, poetic and historic "angles" to the Germans' aerial foray against Crete, from Greece, that the news writers don't happen to mention.

Crete is the most famous and interesting island in the whole storied Mediterranean Sea. It was there that the legendary King Minos—lately proved real—was supposed to have sacrificed human victims to the Minotaur. Recent research seems to prove that Crete had, in fact, a high civilization, and that Greek culture itself was derived from Cretan culture.

Moreover, the art of flying, according to Greek legend, was first attempted in that region, when Icarus soared aloft but fell into the sea. He should have had a gliding plane instead of wings whose adhesive power was weakened by the hot sun.

Let's Look Around

Taking a Glimpse of Hollywood

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—The magic of Baghdad, as it was portrayed in the imaginative fiction of Arabian Nights, has a modern counterpart in the realities of Hollywood as they are revealed by a tour of one of the great motion picture studios here.

The mystic powers attributed to Aladdin's wonderful lamp would fall short of the actual accomplishments of making ready for production any one of the top-notch pictures we are accustomed to seeing on the screen.

It was a trip through the great expanse of Warner Brothers studios that brought first realization of the careful preparation, intensity of effort and vast number of technical and mechanical workers essential to producing a motion picture with sound.

Publicity departments and press agents serve a necessary purpose, of course, but they are too close to the routine of Hollywood to see it from the viewpoint of an interested but non-participating visitor.

We saw many things, for instance, while being shown around the 120-acre Warner lot, about which we had never been told but which we would have been glad to know.

We hadn't even heard that every two and a half minutes of picture, as shown on the screen, represents a day's work by members of the cast and the directing staff, photographers, electricians, sound-effect men and a score of others just outside of camera range.

Nor had we known that of the approximate 3,800 employes in Warner Brothers studios only 100 actually appear in pictures—leaving 3,700 to go about their daily tasks in much the same manner as employes in any less highly publicized industry.

* * * * *

CHATTER CORNER (Hollywood version) So it's in the Green Room we're to have luncheon, with affable Bill Belcher as our table companion and informant. Bill turns out to be a Rochester, N. Y. product who has been in Hollywood for 11 years and wouldn't be happy anywhere else. . . . Over at the next table, why sure enough, there's Martha Raye and Ann Sheridan, who was bridesmaid at Martha's recent wedding, having luncheon with Jack Oakie and Jack Haley, talking about "Navy Blues," the picture they are now making. . . . That's Jack Carson who just stepped over for a word with them. . . . Jane Wyman and Ronald Reagan are coming through the door at this very moment. . . . That attractive blond, why you should know, that's Juanita Stark who has just signed a contract with Warners. And there's Lee Patrick, smiling pleasantly.

* * * * *

OH, SO you're wondering about that gentlemanly appearing fellow over there, seeming more interested in conversation than in his lunch—That's Frederick March and with him are Robert Lord, producer, and Irving Rapper, director, of his new picture, "One Foot In Heaven."

* * * * *

BUT why does Ed Cappeller wish to exchange places at the table with Bill Belcher? For no other reason than that he is thus enabled to get a more direct view of the nearby table at which Constance Bennett is engaged in animated conversation with her secretary—between "shots" on the forthcoming picture, "Law of the Tropics," in which she is now working.

* * * * *

THE FIFTEEN men grouped at that special table? Those are screen writers—swapping yarns during lunch hour, but always on the lookout for an idea . . . if one should happen along.

* * * * *

NOW the luncheon is over, and Bill says it's time to start on a tour of the lot. It turns out to be a long walk. Would you care to go along?

THE UNION, OR THE UNION, WHICH?

The Cry of 'Wolf' Too Often?

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — The fight against continuance of the president's power further to devaluate the dollar is futile, since congress will give him an extension of this power, but the arguments being made contain some interesting prophesies, bearing on the constant talk one hears about the certainty, sooner or later, of inflation.

One of the most striking points is made in a letter sent to members of congress by Walter E. Spahr, professor of economics at New York university, and secretary of the Economists' National committee on monetary policy.

"Let us suppose," writes Spahr, "that at the close of this war our federal debt alone is $150,000,000,000 and that our people find themselves caught in a situation in which they are struggling with a well-nigh unbearable tax burden which promises to continue for at least another generation. What would be the attitude of a hopelessly-oppressed people to the following proposition would it be presented to them?

Golden Words.

"'We shall pay off this huge debt and end this tax burden by the simple expedient of reducing the number of grains of gold in our standard gold dollar. Since that dollar does not circulate, and since the government holds all the gold, the "profit" from devaluation will belong to the government and can be used by it to retire its outstanding debt.

This "profit" first taken, or rather created, by the government, will come to the people in exchange for the government's promises to pay which they now hold. The debt which we need to retire is 150 billion dollars. We shall therefore write up the dollar value of our 25 billion dollars of gold by 150 billion dollars giving it a total value of 175 billion dollars. This will give us a gold dollar weighing 1-7 as much as the present one, or 1.96 grains. There should be nothing new or shocking in this procedure, our standard dollar would simply be comparable to, let us say, the French franc.

Since we devalued the dollar 41 per cent in 1934, without there being any appreciable effect on the price level—as so many economists then reminded us would be the case—we can assume that this further devaluation need not, of necessity, affect our domestic price level. We shall print 150 billion dollars of gold certificates and deposit them with the Federal Reserve banks, and thus the government will have 150 billion dollars of federal debt outstanding. The banks, which hold a large proportion of the federal debt as an asset, will become almost completely liquid once more.

"By cutting the price of our dollar to 1-7 its present value in foreign exchange, European countries can purchase our goods. Our farmers likewise should benefit because of their great surplus of exportable commodities.'"

Spahr doubts, if that day comes, if the people will be warned by the outcry economists may make — that the "pumping of such a huge volume of currency into banks will cause the dam to burst, a fantastic rise in prices, and a shocking decline in the purchasing power of the dollar and in the real income and purchasing power of the people."

One reason why so little attention will be paid to warnings such as Mr. Spahr is now giving congress is that the same people have been crying "Wolf, wolf" for so long—ever since the New Deal decried Andrew Mellon for paying off the national debt and made the balanced budget an interesting item in history.

None the less, there is plenty of danger that the wolf may really come!

Listen World!

First Line of Defense

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I DON'T usually burst into enthusiasm over the statements of my fellow femmes. Generally, I view their efforts with as suspicious an eye as I view my own. And that means plenty. But here's one time when I rise and cheer with lusty whoopees.

Namely, lively Eleanor Roosevelt, when she proclaims that "the best, first-line defense American women can render their nation is to learn how to cook—for it's a far greater service for a woman to know how to cook than it is to know how to hold a gun."

Lady—you've said a mouthful.

And I know of what I cheer. For it has been my fortune—as it has been yours—to cook and observe cooking in every portion of this land. And it's my conviction that if the F. B. I. wants to do a really-two fisted job of patriotic service, it will inspect the soup-pots of this nation as well as the Fifth Columnists. For badly cooked chow can undermine American morale as sure as Mr. Goebbel's propaganda. And is doing it in thousands of homes.

This doesn't mean that the average American family is short of rations. It isn't. Nor does it mean that the average American wife and mother isn't fond of her family and ambitious for its future. She is. It merely means that said wife and mother has less knowledge of food values than almost any woman on earth, and is more complacent over the fact.

There's more to a meal than the makings. There's the love and the faith that went into it. There's the loyalty and sacrifice that made it possible. There's the sense of haven and hope and happiness that rises with its comforting steam, even though the dishes be chipped and the cloth be shabby . . . and the pocketbook be lean.

I've seen how it works. For the last 20 years I've spent most of my time with Italian mountaineers in the California Sierra Nevadas. These men work. They work lustily. Mining . . . tilling the stubborn soil . . . tending the stubborn herds. They rise before dawn. They come home with sagging knees at night. They cannot afford filet mignon to sustain them. Nor do they need such sustenance. Long before they come home their smiling mates have gone into their back-yard gardens, gathered turnips and tomatoes, onions, beans, garlic and herbs, and, with a slice of bacon, made a thick broth which restores sagging flesh and spirit . . . and sends a man refreshed to the problems he must face.

There is the mysterious secret of home-making — that mingling of the common elements of earth and spirit. You cannot buy that product in any store. It is touched by the same miracle which transforms plain bread and wine into the body and blood of God. And the woman who aids that miracle serves her nation infinitely more than if she manned an anti-aircraft gun or flew a plane.

Machinists' Strike on Coast Revives Vinson Bill Chances

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Two weeks ago the Vinson "anti-strike" bill was dead turkey. It had been put to quiet death in committee and even its sponsors weren't talking about it any more. Today the same bill is militantly back on the legislative calendar, practically certain of passage by the House, and with a 50-50 chance of Senate approval.

Organized labor can thank one small group for this complete reversal: The AFL machinist local in San Francisco which broke its contract and staged an outlaw strike tying up desperately needed ship construction in California. This walkout of 1,700 key workers stopped work for 12,000 other men who hesitated to cross the picket lines, and halted the building of 11 ships.

Here is the inside story of the strike—one of the worst blotches on labor's record:

In order to ensure labor stability and obtain maximum production, OPM's labor division established uniform wage-hour standards for all the shipyards on the west coast—$1.12 an hour base pay, time-and-a-half for overtime, and the closed shop.

Previous wage scales ranged from 95 cents to $1.04 an hour, some plants recognizing the unions, others not. But under the new master agreement, pay was uniformly increased and all yards were unionized. It was a big victory for labor.

Among the leaders who participated in the negotiations were Harry Hook and E. F. Dillon, business agents of the San Francisco AFL machinists, Hook making the final motion that the agreement be recommended to the San Francisco Metal Trades Council. Later, the machinists were represented at the Council meeting which accepted the agreement, and international officers of the machinists signed the contract.

Off and On Hook.

One month later, under the leadership of the same Hook and Dillon, the San Francisco machinists struck for $1.15 an hour and double pay for overtime. Walking out at the same time was a CIO machinist local in nearby Oakland, the only craft union in the CIO and completely under the domination of longshoreman Harry Bridges.

The Hook-Dillon type of leadership was further demonstrated during Governor Olson's attempt to settle the strike.

After several long conferences, Hook and Dillon gave their word not to oppose the governor if he addressed a mass meeting of the machinists to urge them to return to work. To make sure there was no misunderstanding, Olson got the approval of the strike committee to make his plea.

After Olson made his speech, both Dillon and Hook took the platform and militantly argued against him.

New Racket.

This case is not the only such instance of AFL handling of defense labor. Last winter and spring AFL building trades business agents shook down millions of dollars in initiation fees from army camp construction workers. It is estimated that the total "take" was not less than $10,000,000.

Today, building trades agents are working a new "shake-down." They are staging strikes for big wage boosts on cost-plus-fixed-fee government projects. These are projects on which the government pays all costs, plus a fixed fee to the contractor for directing the construction. Any wage increase comes entirely out of the pocket of the taxpayer. Naturally the contractor doesn't care and the strikes actually are against the government.

Involved in these pay demands is no question of low wages, excessive work hours, or union recognition. The demands are purely a gouging racket.

In repeated public statements, William Green plus other AFL moguls have uttered pious words of patriotism. But when it comes down to cracking the whip on contract-breakers and racketeers, all Green has to offer is "patience."

"Senator," he replied to Senator Harry Truman, chairman of the committee which questioned Green about the outlaw San Francisco strike, "we learn in life that we must be patient many times. Even with bad boys and bad girls."

Capital Chaff.

When Frank Knox, censor-minded Secretary of the Navy, visited the new battleship USS North Carolina at the New York Navy Yard, the newspapers gave him a big round of publicity. But when he stopped in to look at the British battleship Malaya nearby, he got no publicity whatever. Self-imposed censorship of the press, urged by Knox, worked against him. . . . Those who know the inside of the Hollywood frame-up of Lionel Atwill believed that he will come out all right. . . . Herr Hans Thomsen, head of the German embassy in Washington, is taking vitamin pills. He quotes Milo Perkins as saying vitamins are necessary to offset lack of nourishing elements in the depleted soil of America. . . . Football features the hot senatorial campaign in Texas. One aspirant, state Attorney General Gerald Mann, was a gridiron hero on the S. M. U. football team, and T. C. U.'s famous slingin' Sammy Baugh is an all-out campaigner for young Representative Lyndon Johnson, New Deal candidate in the race.

General Johnson Relief.

President Roosevelt vetoes many of the so-called private bills for payment of claims by individuals; but insiders are betting he will sign one that passed the Senate the other day. This bill is in behalf of one of FDR's loudest critics, General Hugh S. Johnson.

Interesting fact is that the government has had a claim for $1,868.61 against General Johnson ever since he was NRA boss. This was for certain traveling expenses, such as "extravagances" on official trips, disallowed by the General Accounting Office.

Johnson refused to pay the government on the ground that the "excess" items, chiefly plane fare, Pullman staterooms and extra hotel rooms for business offices, were legitimate; also that instead of over-spending he actually had to dig down in his own pocket.

The record bears this out. Johnson spent around $20,000 of his private funds while NRA boss.

His $6,000-a-year salary, which he fixed himself, was much less than the pay of some assistants and far from enough to enable him to live on the scale that was required of him. However, the Accounting Office demanded a refund. Finally, on advice of friends, Johnson appealed to Congress.

When popular Senator Jimmy Byrnes of South Carolina heard his story, he promptly introduced a bill to cancel the claim. It passed the Senate unanimously and the president doubtless will sign it.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—As has been stated previously here and elsewhere, the Brooklyn Dodgers breed a strange sort of loyalty among their followers . . . . and their followers are legion. As a matter of fact, almost anybody in Brooklyn will kick out your teeth if you so much as intimate that their darlings are not going to win the pennant this year.

What I am trying to say is that the good people of Brooklyn are never lukewarm in their enthusiasm for the team . . . When the Dodgers win, they are in heaven . . . . But when the lose, the police have to patrol the bridges to keep the heart-broken citizens from leaping to their own destruction . . . You think this is exaggerated a little, don't you?

Well, you do not know Brooklyn . . . Last summer a little incident took place in a Brooklyn pub that will illustrate the point, and very nicely, for you . . . An alien came in . . . Probably he was from Manhattan, or Hoboken . . . By "alien" is meant just anybody who isn't from Brooklyn.

Well, this alien was standing in the pub, having a beer, and the rest of the crowd was singing the glories of the Dodgers . . . The alien looked around . . . "I think the Dodgers are lousy," he said in a loud voice.

There was a sudden and ominous silence. If anybody had taken the bother to drop a pin, you could have heard it . . . Suddenly, one of the Dodger fans let out a harsh cry and ran out of the saloon . . . He ran out somewhere, and got a gun, and came back and shot the blasphemer dead . . . That isn't an exaggeration. He shot the guy. And the guy dropped dead. Right there. It simply doesn't pay to make unguarded statements in the presence of Dodger rooters. Of course, the man who did the shooting is in the penitentiary. But that doesn't help the man who thought the Dodgers were lousy. He is inconveniently dead, and never again can he cheer a Dodger defeat or stand in public places and make unwise observations.

As you may recall, one of the celebrated sports news pictures of last season showed a fist-fight between a National league umpire and a fan. The fan was a Dodger fan, a Brooklyn fan. He didn't like a decision the umpire had made on the field. So he piled out of the grandstand, or maybe it was the bleachers, and lit into the umpire with his fists. It made a good picture. It was in most of the newspapers everywhere. It was just another little link in the chain of evidence that when the good people of Brooklyn go in for a team, they go all out. Flatbush simply doesn't believe in half-measures, and never has.

Among the leather-lungs who yell for the Dodgers on all occasions is a Chinese headwaiter at Ruby Foo's whose name is Billy Gwon. Billy used to play semi-pro ball on a team with Vito Tamulis. But the important thing to remember is that Billy yells his insults in Chinese . . . I have asked him to give me a few examples, and here they are: Ah que jun (kill the umpire); Looie how you (ya big bum); Ah koy bo (we want a hit); kin que cho (throw him out); and who kar lor (get a basket). Surely, even to umpires, the ways of the Chinese remain inscrutable.

A Farmer's Diary

'What Is So Rare?'

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

DURING the bleak, snowy season of March when winds were rough and drifts were high about the roads and fences,—when rain and sleet but rarely sunshine filled the slowly passing hours,—I looked ahead with real anticipation to the time when we would silently pass from the welcome month of May to the precious days of June.

Now wheat fields stretching far to the south and west are beautifully headed and stand in the silent evening, thrifty, dark green and still. Each morning the fairy-like strands of bloom are visible, laden with the dew. At noon long graceful waves remind me of the sea. Even now, looking across the lovely green expanse, I seem to feel the hint of harvest time.

The maples have adult sized leaves and beneath the long, spreading branches the winged dual seed pods lie scattered thickly. Some, carried on a generous wind, have been whirled far afield.

Along the ledge of stone above our spring, roses bud in great profusion. The south wind brings the odor of wild roses from along the old worm fence at the edge of my neighbor's pasture. Wild strawberries hide among the grass at the orchard's edge, red ripe and luscious.

Soft odors float through our open window at early dawn, after a night time shower. Dreams of watered pastures, blooming hillsides, blue skies and the song of the mourning dove are no longer illusions. Paradise is just beyond our cottage door. The very air is saturated with song and bloom—our doors, our windows and our hearts are open to the wonders of early June.

The quail whistles from her home in the thicket, and her voice echoes back from the hill. The ground sparrow flits from her nest in the grass and I see four tiny brown speckled eggs she has left. A meadow lark broods silently, concealed in a clump of red clover.

Every clod is alive with potential growth. Every living twig burgeons with power. "There is no leaf or blade too mean to be some happy creature's palace."

Nation's Only Woman Circus 'Boss' Play's Role of 'Mother' to Show

She's One of Four Generations to Run 'Big Top' Personnel

"Circus people are just like children," says Pauline Russell, who as the nation's only woman circus owner and manager, "mothers" the Russell Bros. circus which played here yesterday.

A peppy and middle-aged circus "boss," Miss Russell's "mothering" duties consist of making a tour of the show two or three times a day, seeing that the Sioux Indians get along with the camels and vice versa. Then too, she said, there is always the job of seeing that "all my boys" eat adequately and buy new clothes when they're needed.

Miss Russell is the fourth generation of the Russell family to run circuses. He great-grandfather, Jake; grandfather, John, and her father, William Russell, were all in the business before her. Of course, she explains, it's a little different today. In those days they traveled with wagons, but today it's trucks. Miss Russell owns 40 herself and there are about 20 others belonging to troupe members.

In 1926, the Russell Brothers show folded while managed by Emerson Russell. Miss Russell said her brother later became an evangelist. "He just had to get an audience someway," she explained.

Then, in 1928, Pauline, after touring with another show and a monkey act, saved enough to start all over. "Banks won't take a chance with a circus," she said. "You've just got to get the money at the gate and save it or not get it at all."

It is not, however, a single-handed proposition. The feminine manager claims the secret of her success lies in finding good bosses to handle the various departments. She turns the tents over to the canvas boss, the animals to their particular boss, etc. That leaves her time to manage the business and see that all her performers behave themselves.

Circus "boss" and ape on friendly terms.

"It's been hard work, but this is my 13th year," she said, "and I've never missed a show all through the depression."

When asked about the cloudy skies, she said, "Oh, we never worry about that. In the circus business you just shut your eyes and shoot."

This year the show will go as far east as possible before returning to its Rolla, Mo., winter camp, next door to the army's new Camp Leonard Wood. Incidentally, the circus furnished lighting from its trucks while this camp was being built.

SHIFT ALIMONY PAYMENT PLAN

Clerk of Courts Office To Be Clearing House For Funds Due Divorced Women.

A new set-up for handling alimony payments had been inaugurated today in Richland county, making the office of the clerk of courts a clearing house for the payments.

For several years the job of collecting the payments and paying the alimony money to divorced women has been handled by the common pleas court bailiff.

The change was ordered by state examiners who found in auditing county books that no accurate record had been kept of alimony money handled by the court.

Under the new system, men who have been ordered by the court to pay alimony must deposit the funds with Clerk of Courts Howard Wenning who will then issue a county check for the amount to the divorced women for whom the money is intended.

With payments made by check, there will be a record of them for examiners, Wenning said. The office will handle about 25 accounts, issuing most of the checks twice a month, he added.

ROAD HEARING DELAYED AGAIN

Commissioners Order Meeting on Newville-Pleasant Hill Continued Third Time.

Still awaiting completing of the Newville-Pleasant Hill road before accepting it into the county system, county commissioners yesterday continued a hearing on the road for the third time.

Expecting the road to be completed by July 1, they set the hearing on acceptance for June 30.

The 2.8 mile section of road is being constructed by the U. S. War department to replace a road which was abandoned because of the Pleasant Hill reservoir project. The war department took over the Muskingum Conservancy district projects several months ago and assumed responsibility for road construction near the reservoirs.

C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the board of commissioners, said the federal government is building a new gravel road to serve farm homes in the Pleasant Hill section. The old road was abandoned recently and commissioners last week sold the bridges on it.

Commissioners are expected to formally establish the new route as a part of the county system June 30. The county will maintain it.

Death Valley, the hottest and one of the dryest regions in America, is 276 feet below sea level.

SIXTH GRADERS GET DIPLOMAS IN SMALLEST GRADUATING CLASS

Two sixth graders representing the smallest graduating class in Mansfield this year, received diplomas from Country Day school yesterday when commencement exercises were held before parents and friends at the school.

Elizabeth Funk and James Draffan were the graduates and they shared the program honors by dividing the commencement numbers between them.

Elizabeth gave the class poem, sang a selection with a trio that included Vera Saleste and Sigrid Meisse, and also presented the class gift to the school.

The gift, a lace table cloth for school social affairs and teas, was acknowledged by Sigrid Meisse in behalf of the school.

James Draffan presented the class history and offered a piano solo.

The graduate program was supplemented with songs and readings by the upper grades, kindergarten and primary department, under the direction of the instructors, Miss Angeline Shaneff, Miss Margaret Cayford and Miss Lella Graff.

An important feature of the exercises was the presentation of merit awards and prizes to winners of the recent art exhibit by Miss Shaneff, supervisor.

In the art exhibit Ellen Bromfield received the prize for the upper grades and Elizabeth Funk was given honorable mention. Frances Draffan received the primary prize and Betsy Kirtley the kindergarten prize. Sally Stoodt received honorable mention.

James Draffan received a prize for submitting the most articles for the C. D. S. Press the past year. Georgia Ann McLellan received a perfect attendance prize.

O. K. CLAIMS

Commissioners Order $379 Payment to Farmers.

Payment of claims totaling $379 for sheep and other farm animals killed last month by dogs was approved yesterday by Richland county commissioners.

Animal claims for the month were considerably above the monthly average for the county. The increase has attributed by commissioners to the fact that farm animals are permitted more freedom in warm weather.

Nine claims, ranging from $13 to $70, were approved. Largest claim was filed by A. H. Wolford, Weller township farmer. Hugh McMeeken, also of Weller township, submitted a claim for $66.

FOUR FINED

Traffic Violators Arraigned In Municipal Court.

Four traffic violators were fined yesterday by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch on arraignment in Municipal court. Three were arrested by state highway patrolmen for speeding and another for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol.

Herman Wolfe of Princeton, Ind., David E. Peacock and Don C. Le Coumpte, both of Dayton, forfeited bonds of $25 each.

George Uhler of Cleveland, paid a fine of $50 for operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol and had his driver's license revoked for 60 days.

FORMER LOCAL PASTOR RETURNS FOR WEDDING

One of Prettiest Weddings of Season Was Solemnized Monday Afternoon for Miss Elizabeth Black and Rev. O. S. Goerner.

BEAUTIFUL appointments combined to make memorable the wedding late Monday afternoon of Miss Elizabeth Black, Lind avenue, and Rev. Oswald Sherman Goerner of Portland, Ind., former Mansfield pastor at the First Lutheran church. Tall lighted seven-branch candelabra on either side of the altar gave a pleasant glow for the pretty background of palms, ferns and large beauty vases of white and pink peonies.

Approaching the altar on the arm of her father, F. Lloyd Black of Shiloh, the bride was lovely in a formal wedding gown of starched marquisette fashioned with chantilly lace and marquisette over white satin. The gown was made with long leg-o-mutton sleeves and a lace bodice, with sheer marquisette yoke, finished with a round neckline. The extremely full skirt was attached to a tight midrift and fell to a long train. Miss Black's exquisite bridal veil was the one worn by Mrs. R. W. Huge of Bucyrus, a close friend of the bride, at her wedding. It was worn virgin style. The circular veil and full length train was attached to a pearlized headpiece of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a lace handkerchief of her grandmother's, which had been carried by her sister, Mrs. John Rachel, at her recent wedding. She carried a white prayer book covered with gardenias in a shower effect.

Preceding the service nuptial music was played by Mrs. Clayson Bell, whose selections were "Andante Cantabile" by Tschaikowsky, and "June" by the same composer, "Liebestraum" by Liszt, "Because" by D'Hardelot, and "Serenade" by Schubert. During the ceremony she played "The Lord's Prayer" by Malotte. G. A. Goerner, of Aurora, Ill., uncle of the bridegroom, was the vocalist, singing "Without Thee" by Sheetz, and "I Love You Truly" by Bond.

Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor, read the single ring service for his former young assistant and his bride. Many friends and relatives attended the open church service solemnized at 4:30 o'clock.

Ushering the guests to their seats were Franklin Black of Toledo, brother of the bride, and Eldon Sherrock of Mansfield.

Attendants for Miss Black were attractively gowned in lovely pastel colors. Matron of honor was Mrs. John Rachel, jr., of Mansfield, and maid of honor Miss Janice Black of Shiloh, sisters of the bride, and little Henrietta Stiles of Mansfield, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. T. Stiles, who served as flower girl. Their frocks were in similar styles, dresses fashioned in peasant type with long full sleeves and high round necklines, similar to that of the bride's. A lowered waistline effect draped daintily in full skirts. Mrs. Rachel wore lemon-yellow chiffon over taffeta, trimmed in velvet ribbon of a deeper shade. She also wore an opal ring, the gift of the bride.

Miss Black wore woods-violet shade, trimmed with velvet ribbon in deep shade, and a bracelet, the gift of the bride. Their headpieces were of velvet ribbon with black veils of matching illusion. Little Miss Stiles wore a long dress of pink marquisette with a tie-back sash, and a dainty shirred poke-bonnet with side bow and streamers to match. The attendants carried Colonial bouquets of larkspur and roses.

Paul G. Goerner of West Burlington, Iowa, served his brother as best man.

Mrs. Black, mother of the bride, attended the wedding in a blue sky lace dress with white accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Goerner, the bridegroom's mother, wore a navy silk crepe frock with navy and white accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

Immediately following the service a reception was held at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilger of Shiloh. Forty friends and relatives were present. The wedding supper was served buffet style with appointments in pink and white. Mrs. Franklin Black, sister-in-law of the bride, presided.

Later the couple left for a trip through northern Ohio and Indiana. For traveling Mrs. Goerner wore a navy and yellow print dress, yellow jacket with matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside at 620 East Arch street, Portland, Ind.

Mrs. Goerner, who has been a registered X-ray technician at the Mansfield General hospital, was graduated from Shiloh high school, received A. B. degree at Ashland college, and X-ray training at University hospital in Cleveland. She is a member of the American Registry of X-Ray Technicians, American Society of X-Ray Technicians, and the Ohio society; Phi Alpha Gamma sorority at Ashland college, and various organizations of the First Lutheran church. Rev. Goerner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Erich A. Goerner of West Burlington, Ia., was graduated from Burlington high school, Burlington Junior college, Carthage college, Carthage, Ill., and Chicago Lutheran seminary, where he received his B. D. degree He is now pastor of the Zion Lutheran church in Portland, Ind.

Out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Huge of Bucyrus, Miss Lylie Black of Lima, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Goerner of Chicago, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Jay Darvis of Youngstown, Miss Margaret Mullen of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. K. W. Rausch and daughter, Martha, of Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Black and daughter, Winifred, of Ashland, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Smith of Newark, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Black and daughter, Judith, of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Goerner of West Burlington, and Paul of that place, Miss Doris Stout of Ashland, and Mrs. V. F. McFarland of Cleveland.

High Style Fashions, Fancy Work

By MARIAN MARTIN

"Teensters — here's the outfit you need to see you smartly through the sunshine months. It's a dress and bolero ensemble designed by Marian Martin and quick-as-a-flash to make from easy Pattern 9682. The dress is very young and jaunty, with a round, simple neckline that's surrounded by a "sunburst" of darts. The bloused bodice lines are held trim at the waist by a set-in belt that makes you grandly lean and smooth. Just two pattern parts form the skirt, which has a youthful, easy flare. Ric-rac edging makes a nice color accent. That well-cut bolero gives a street-costume look and would be smart in contrast, with the revers to match the frock. Altogether, one of the smartest of the new-season crop!

Pattern 9682 may be ordered only in junior miss sizes 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17 and 18. Size 13 dress, requires 3 yards 39 inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your Size, Name, Address, and Style Number.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Then reserve it for me at once," Mr. Veritzen answered, "and have them send up not only the outside keys, but the ones which belong to that hidden lock."

Mr. Milner again turned obediently to the telephone and transmitted his employer's order.

"They will be up immediately," he said as he hung up the receiver.

"Very well," Mr. Veritzen commented. "Now, just one thing. When that door is unlocked, can that bit of molding be put back so that the door looks like the other panels again?"

"Oh, yes," Mr. Milner returned. "As soon as the key is removed from the lock, that piece of molding can be swung back over the keyhole, and no one would ever dream there was a door there."

Veritzen Gets All Details.

"And with that piece swung back while the door was still unlocked, could the door be locked from the other side?" Mr. Vritzen persisted, and I saw the manager's eyebrows lift ever so slightly at this apparently absurd passion for detail.

But he did not permit the eyebrows to arch high enough for his employer's notice. In Dicky's parlance, it "isn't on the free list" for any one of Philip Veritzen's employes to question any word or action of his.

"Oh, yes," he answered quickly, "the door can be easily locked from the other side."

"That's all right, then," Mr. Veritzen said, and his words were punctuated by a tap upon the outside door of the suite.

"The keys," Mr. Milner said, going to the door, opening it, and taking from the bell boy outside the keys he had ordered sent up.

When Milner dismissed the boy and came back to us, Mr. Veritzen gestured toward the door, and I mentally commented that almost any other man in so stressful a moment would have held out his hand for the keys and used them himself.

But the great impresario, whose name is a synonym for theatrical success has so accustomed himself to quick and efficient service for every moment of his life, that he never does anything for himself which he possibly can delegate to another.

Dicky once said: "If old Phil could hire a man to do his breathing for him he'd pay him well," and I had smilingly acquiesced in his comment.

Yet, if the necessity arises, no one can move more efficiently, strike more quickly than can the aging theatrical magnate.

Mr. Milner, at his employer's gesture, had stooped to the keyhole, inserted the key and unlocked the door. When he threw it open, Mr. Veritzen waved Olga and me ahead of him into the other room.

But we loitered long enough to see Mr. Milner withdraw the key at his employer's nod, and slip the bit of molding back over the keyhole. Then we went on through the door while behind us Philip Veritzen echoed our mental comment.

"Perfect!" he said. Then, when he and the manager had followed us into the other room, he gave Mr. Milner explicit directions.

"First," he said, "let us make sure that they key works on this side," and the manager swiftly demonstrated the efficiency of key and lock. Then, leaving the key in the lock, Mr. Milner straightened himself in the posture of a soldier ready to receive the rest of his orders.

Orders Armed Guards.

He did not have to wait. The owner of the Lansfield was already speaking in staccato, imperative fashion.

"How soon can you get four armed guards up to this corridor?" he asked.

Mr. Milner gulped once, but he evidently knew the tradition that if Philip Veritzen wished a live ostrich at any hour of the day or night it must be procured for him.

"That will be possible almost immediately," he said, "but—do you expect any happening that will alarm the guests?"

Mr. Veritzen's eyebrows almost touched his hair at the question, but to my surprise he answered it.

"Not if you play your cards correctly," he said. "Get those guards up here, and then I'll try to explain this thing to you."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

THINK OF EVERYTHING

How are you at thinking of all the various factors which threaten to cause the defeat of your contract? If you think of most of them, but fail to take into account just some one dangerous posibility, that one thing may be the rock upon which your ship is wrecked. On many an occasion, the greatest players protect themselves against not only all the dangers which do exist, but against some which might exist but don't.

When West led the heart J against this contract, Morrie Elis, top player of the nation in the last championship season, decided to play East for the K, so came up with the A. Next he finessed the club Q and led tthe club A. West's ruffing of this made it look bad, especially when the spade 4 was returned. The 7 won that, the club 3 was ruffed by the spade 10, West discarding a diamond, and the heart 3 was ruffed by the spade 9. When the club 5 was led on the seventh trick to the spade Q, West discarded another diamond.

Now came the beautiful play, the heart Q, which East had to cover, ruffed by the spade J. The spade A and K were then laid down, the latter squeezing East, who had to choose between trashing his club K or one of his three diamonds; if the club, then the 7 would become good; if a diamond, the dummy's three diamonds would win.

As Mr. Elis played, he protected himself against every possibility. The heart Q play would have been vital if West held one more diamond; in that event the squeeze would have been ultimately between West's heart 10, standing guard over the dummy's heart 8, and West's three diamonds. He also guarded himself against West making a brilliant under-ruff on the seventh trick so as to preserve three diamonds. If West had done that, the squeeze would have been a double one. On the tenth trick, West would have had to part with either his heart 10, only guard over dummy's 8, or one of his three diamonds; if he discarded one of those, the squeeze would have turned automatically then upon East between diamonds and the clubs. So his play was airtight, regardless of what the opponents held or what they did.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, June 4.

Swift-moving events, with very definite coups in the direction of high hopes and lofty ambitions, may be read from the benefic chain of planetary aspects ruling this day. There may be sudden change of radical significance in life, its purpose, environs and objectives, but all lead in the direction of cherished goals, with romance and adventure riding high. But precaution in signing important papers, in verbal agreements as well, and reasonable care in travel are recommended. Good friends are at hand in times of stress and strain.

Those whose birthday it is should be on the threshold of a year of great opportunity for progress, productive work of high order, and the fruition of very ambitious hopes and wishes of a personal as well as business character. The opening may arrive with whirlwind and breathtaking force and uproot old routines, environs and objectives, but withal there will be new friendships, romance and daring adventure. Be wise in travel, and in signing all sorts of writings and agreements, as undercover tactics are indicated. Seek happiness and high goals with confidence.

HONOR PRINCIPAL.

Members of the Bowman School Mothers' club and the Parent-Teacher association of the school will honor G. W. Harmony, principal, who is leaving that school, at a party Thursday evening at John's park at 7:30. Members of the Mothers' club will meet Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the school for a regular meeting.

The Secret of the Marshbanks + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER V

The judge returned before either spoke again, for although there was time for more words, Cherry noted that they did not say them but sat looking steadily at each other for a full half minute before Fran dropped her eyes. Amy came in from the hall too, followed by two young men in formal evening attire and there was a little stir of departure. Cherry instinctively stood up when the others did; that was convent training, but she suffered agonies of shame when nobody paid any attention to her.

When they all left the room she followed, not knowing what else to do, and slowly mounted the stairs between the palms, praying in her heart that no one would notice her or speak to her. Completely concealed and sitting down on the stairs until they should be gone, she heard Fran's voice just below her.

"You'll have to ask Jud that," the woman said.

"Who is she?" said the judge's goodhumored voice, evidently repeating a question. "Why, it's a guardianship case. I'm to turn her over to Mrs. Porteous Porter on Monday; she's to do secretarial work for the old lady."

"If I had seen her dress I might have copied it for tonight," said Amy with a little titter.

"I never saw a mole but I imagine she looks like the young female mole," the younger of the two escorts said.

"In the molting season," said another male voice, and there was a laugh.

"Jud, you don't have to ask people like that here," Fran said without feeling. "You told me last week she was handsome. Honestly!"

The last word was rich with protest, reproach, indulgence. Cherry crouched close to the rail. She could presently escape to her room; no one would ever know. But she felt as if her body and soul would be rent apart with the violence of feeling that possessed her.

"There's a subject for your next portrait, Mr. Coates! said Fran, and Cherry who could not see them could tell from her tone that for the moment they were alone. "Take little What's-her-name Rawlings."

"'Mr. Coates'?" He echoed. "I thought I was 'Kelly'"

"Did I call you Kelly?" laughing deep, faintly hoarse voice said. "When did I call you Kelly?"

"At the table there a minute ago."

"I must do something about my subliminal consciousness."

Fran and Amy and the two young men in evening clothes went away laughing, the big street door shut, and Judge Marshbanks and Kelly Coates came back across the hall and stood chatting for a moment before the artist said that he must start on his way to Sausalito, and the judge went off to his bridge game. But by this time the stairway was empty, and Cherry was back in the luxurious, dimly lighted guest room, standing perfectly still at one of the big windows, looking out into the darkness of the unfamiliar world, studying the scene of the night city with eyes that saw nothing, trying to think with her mind and soul one whirl of furious emotion.

Rage and shame and jealousy and a hundred other new and wretched feelings possessed her. Shaken and throbbing and blinded, she rested her face against the cool glass of the window and pressed one hand against the turbulent pain that was her heart.

Now, for the first time in her life, the significance of being a Saint Dorothea's girl swept over her. A girl to be laughed at and pitied and despised. It was a place for grils who, innocent enough themselves, were nevertheless victims of circumstances that were not innocent; girls who must stay out of the public eyes summer and winter alike; girls who had no home to which to go; no families to welcome them and miss them.

She had accepted it, all her life long, as had the others; had sometimes found it even a romantic situation, something over which to speculate and dream dreams. But these dreams had all melted away into the vapor of which they were born during this one encounter with bitter truth. There was nothing desirable, nothing stimulating and unusual about being a superfluous girl of twenty, trained for hard work and loneliness and bleak usefulness in a world that held other girls, exquisite girls with heart-shaped little faces, and diaphanous frocks of pale yellow!

Cherry hated Fran, hated Amy, with all the vigor of her nature. They had laughed at her, and she was helpless. They despised her, and there was no reason why they should not. Life would not be long enough for her to right the burning wrong of it.

"They all love her," she whispered. "Why shouldn't they? She dances and she wears beautiful clothes and her father was the judge's brother and this is her home! She'll dance tonight, with those orchids on her shoulder—lights—and men—and everyone asking her to dance. I hope she breaks a leg!

"But it wouldn't matter if she did," her unhappy thoughts ran on; "they'd make a fuss about her. 'Amy Marshbanks broke her leg, isn't that awful?' They'd carry her to bed and give her flowers and make twice as much fuss as before. She said she'd have copied my dress if she'd seen it in time! I wish she had to wear it!

"And it isn't my fault, it isn't my fault!" she sobbed, suddenly boohooing like a child with her wet face against the window. "I'd like to have everyone crazy about me. I'd like to have a grandmother and someone like the judge to care about me, and live in a place like this!

"And what chance have I to be like them and talk the way they do and wear the clothes they do? No chance, and it isn't fair, and I hope she breaks her leg. 'Poor Amy Marshbanks may never walk again.'

"I suppose I ought to love her, because she's my enemy," Cherry was presently reflecting more quietly, when she was leaning, spent and exhausted, against the window frame. "But how can I? I never did anything mean to her or to Mrs. Marshbanks either, and they know that I came from Saint Dorothea's, and they laughed at me. I'll not cry any more. But I'll never love them and I'll never forgive them—"

ARMY LIFE ON FILM

FORT DIX, N. J.—(INS)—Life at Fort Dix will be the subject of a forthcoming "March of Time" release. Already, cameramen have exposed 12,000 feet of film.

THEATERS

Steele Struggle.

Lives and loves of the men in the steel industry are depicted in "Hot Steel," showing at the Ritz. Richard Arlen and Andy Devine are teamed in the production that deals with the struggle of two men for the control of a new process, Arlen on one hand and Donald Brigg, on the other. Peggy Moran, daughter of Earl Moran, the illustrator, and Ann Nagel motivate the romantic plot. "The Great Mr. Nobody" is the co-attraction.

Plane Sabotage.

Dead end streets are sometimes regarded as roads to the big house but for Bobby Jones, co-starred with Leo Gorcey in "Flying Wild," showing at the Park, they blazed the trail to stardom. Jones was one of the original "Dead End Kids," and was famous before his eighteenth birthday. "Flying Wild" revolves about the attempts of a saboteurs to cripple the production of an airplane factory working on defense orders with Gorcey in the role of a suspicious character. In a lighter vein, "Buck Privates," the co-attraction shows Bud Abbott and Lou Costello having fun in camp.

Newspaper Romance.

"Penny Serenade," the romantic story of an errant newspaperman and his bride, first in Tokyo, and then in California, concludes today at the Ohio. Starring Cary Grant and Irene Dunne the picture deals with the ups and downs of a roving correspondent and the struggle he and his bride put forth to adjust their lives following an earthquake. Beulah Bondi is featured.

Spine Tingler.

"Man Made Monster," another spine-tingler, tops the bill opening at the Madison today. Following the strange events in a mad scientist's transformation of a normal human being into a super-charged monster by means of electrical shocks the film offers a succession of high tension thrills. Lionel Atwill portrays the scientist and the cast includes Lon Chaney, jr., Anne Nagel, Frank Albertson and Samuel S. Hinds. Dick Foran and Leo Carrillo are appearing in "Horror Island," as the second film.

Sabotage Blamed In Huge Bomber Crash

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

I HAVE spent the last three days days trying to figure out where Censor Will Hays was when the scissors boys were viewing "Blood and Sand." Taking a dip in Darryl Zanuck's aquamarine swimming pool? Leaning on the rail at Santa Anita? Or frisking Lana Turner's wardrobe for contraband "sweaters"?

Now, this is no complaint on my part. I am no advocate of censorship, either of woolen goods as applied to the starlet torso or of excess flimsy stripped therefrom; I know how hot it is under the lights of those Hollywood sound stages and I think it is kind-hearted of the customers to see to it that young lady actresses who labor before the cameras are not too heavily bundled up.

Dorothy Kilgallen

But in fairness to Miss Turner and the other girls who are so talented in knitted wear, I don't get it. I refer impartial observers to Miss Rita Hayworth's costumes in "Blood and Sand," and then I ask: Which lifts your eyebrows higher, if at all—Miss Turner in a turtle-necked sweater, or Miss Hayworth in that oh-my-goodness gauze?

If Mr. Hayes will please vote first, the others can form a line after him.

I have had about enough of "Amapola," thanks. . . . Just heard about a funny situation at the Iceland restaurant. The management started making arrangements to have it air-conditioned for the summer, then discovered that because the property belonged to Columbia university, they'd have to get permission from Nicholas Murray Butler! . . . I can't pass a street corner pitchman without thinking of Clyde Hager and his hilarious potato peeler routine with the "get away, brother, you bother me" monologue.

My favorite children's books are the Oz volumes. The set I had when I was little is thumb-printed and dog-eared from being re-read.

Having Ronald Colman around the bistros makes the town look very romantic.

People from all walks of life pop into the news from time to time as authors, but offhand I can't think of any cop on a beat turning in a thrilling drama about his experiences. Edgar Rice Burroughs, who was once a policeman, has done all right with those highly imaginative jungle thrillers about Tarzan.

Most impertinent thing in the world is a sudden rain. It has no respect for propriety or for class, and in a twinkling a downpour can cause a well-organized traffic stream of humanity to break up like the pieces of a kaleidoscope, with aqua-terrified mortals darting for subways, theater marquees, and store doorways.

That Eddie Cantor is so cute. He pays his publicity director more than any p. a. in town—but only so he can win half of it back playing gin rummy!

Most nonchalant fellows I've ever encountered are the seamen from the Malaya. They received word of the sinking of the Hood with a "doesn't matter much" air.

When I go to night clubs where the proprietors have thought up subtle innuendoes for their powder rooms, I always go daffy trying to figure out whether I'm a Stag or a Doe, a Kini or a Wahini, a Mare or a Stallion, a Ewe or a Ram. . . . I'm probably not at all original in thinking that Dick Stabile is the world's greatest living saxophone player. He can make sounds with a saxophone that I've never heard before.

The people I hate most in the world are the people who crack their knuckles. . . . Those resolve-shattering window displays in Toffenetti's Broadway spot make me wish grandma had never invented the strawberry shortcake. . . . This would be a good summer to revive "Show Boat." . . . Someone ought to invent a way of losing childhood nicknames. It must be maddening to be grown-up and be called by some tag that was all right when you were six, but is awfully silly now. Bowen Charleston Tufts, the singer at the Glass Hat, is 6' 4" tall and no kiddie—but he's still called "Sonny," the name his mother used when he was in kindergarten! . . . I've never met anyone who didn't love George Gershwin's music.

I never pass the Gotham Hotel without thinking of the summer day when the boy stood on the ledge of an upper window for eleven hours before jumping off, while crowds watched breathless in the street below.

Wonder how Popeye and Superman would come out in a fist fight?

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Writers who sat up all night after the Rudolph Hess story broke had scenarios on studio desks the next morning, but no Hess movie is on tap yet.

The incident is being incorporated in new sequences of "Underground," story of anti-Nazi plotting inside Germany, which offered a logical opening. "Man Hunt," also with a Nazi theme, will include Hess in a montage of news events covering a time lapse in the story, which is set mainly in the post-Munich, pre-war period. This montage, bringing the story up to date for the fadeout, will be filmed just before "Man Hunt" is released—so that not only Hess but subsequent events can be included.

ROBBIN COONS

One possible result of the Hess explosion on the front pages may be new flights of imagination on the part of writers. Producers who keep telling them their plots aren't logical and couldn't happen are getting a stock: "The Hess thing couldn't happen, either." Truth has been established once more as stranger than fiction.

Another front-pager, the rescue of the entangled parachutist in mid-air, almost made the movies within the week. It was projected for insertion in a Gene Autry flicker, but dropped on the grounds of expense. Done in "process," it would have been feasible—and a lot less hazardous than the experience of Marine Lieut. Walter S. Osipoff. But this great air adventure will be in a movie, sure as the reels go 'round.

After which it's no surprise that Garbo, in that dual comedy role, will slap Garbo.

PLANS DRAWN FOR ROUTE 42 PROGRAM HERE

Highway Engineer Estimates $200,000 Would Be Spent on City Thoroughfares.

Mansfield streets carrying U. S. Route 42 traffic through the city may be improved to the extent of almost $200,000 as part of the nation's defense highway program if the plans of Vance Grimes, district engineer of the state highway department, are carried out.

Grimes announced his plans for building up this area's section of route 42 at the same time that President Roosevelt urged congress to approve additional appropriations of $125,000 for the defense roads. State Highway Director Hal Sours said that he would confer with U. S. bureau of roads officials at Washington tomorrow in regard to Ohio's program.

The president proposed that $100,000,000 be authorized specifically for assisting in the development of access roads and $25,000,000 to strengthen bridges and widen services in key areas.

The message said that the federal works administration soon would submit a draft of a bill authorizing the appropriations "and it is hoped that this matter may have early consideration."

Under the district engineer's plan, route 42 would be widened and resurface from Park avenue east and the subway to the square, around the square, South Main street and Lexington avenue to the city's southern limits.

In addition to the streets in Mansfield, two bridges in the southern part of the county would be widened and the highway generally patched and improved. Two other bridges would be widened north of Ashland.

Grimes announced that $21,271 would be spent to resurface the highway passing through Ashland. Also included on the district program would be the construction of a half million dollar strip of highway four and a third miles south of West Salem. The highway would be 24 feet wide with ten feet berms and would be built military style. Only one-way traffic would be allowed, the present roadbed of route 42 being resurfaced to serve as the other traffic lane.

Grimes issued a schedule which his division hoped to carry out in Mansfield if adequate funds are appropriated. Included will be $86,000 for improvement from Cook to Davis roads; $14,000 from Davis road to Cline avenue; $18,000 from Cline avenue to South Main street; $25,930 from South Main street and Lexington avenue to Park avenue; $23,440 for a truck road to divert truck traffic; and $29,835 for the street around the square and down Park avenue east to the subway.

The streets would be widened to 44 feet to comply with the federal government's military road laws.

OHIO'S LABOR RESERVOIR HIT

BUC Chief Claims National Defense Program Has 'Depleted' Supply.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The national defense program has struck deeply into Ohio's skilled labor reservoir supply, H. C. Atkinson, bureau of unemployment compensation director, reported today. He said the supply had been "seriously depleted" in half of 441 essential occupations.

An inventory taken last month showed that there were less than 10 applicants for jobs in 114 skilled job classifications, he said, although there were 15,126 skilled workers registered in the BUC branch offices for 232 occupations.

Atkinson said the shortage of labor was most apparent in the building trades. Other occupations where shortages are "critical" include: airplane workers, machinists, die makers, pattern molders, motorcycle repairmen, gunsmiths, automobile testers, ship, shop and powerhouse electricians, inspectors and harness repairmen.

Semi-skilled occupations where less than 10 job registrants were on file included: coremakers, shop machine operators, carburetor inspectors, grinders, electrical assemblers, welders and tool dressers.

YOUTH STRICKEN

Authorities Probe Death of Boy on Cincinnati Street Car.

CINCINNATI —(U.P.)— Coroner Frank M. Coppock, jr., today was to examine the body of Ralph Mitchell, 6, a schoolboy, who died suddenly on a street car.

He collapsed on the car yesterday afternoon. Schoolmates with him said he was holding a metal handgrip on a seat when he cried: "I got a shock, gee, it hurts." Then he slumped to the floor.

HIT BY TRAIN

Jeromesville Youth, In U. S. Navy, Has Legs Amputated.

A Jeromesville youth, a sailor at an eastern submarine base, suffered critical injuries last night when he was run over by a train on a freight siding.

Harry E. Burgman, jr., 22, stationed at New Haven, Conn., had his legs amputated after being hit by a train at nearby Waterford. His condition today was described as "critical."

MARRIED MEN WITH DEPENDENTS TO BE DEFERRED FROM SERVICE

(By United Press)

CINCINNATI — Blanket deferment from military service for married men with children today bore the approval of Ohio Selective Service headquarters.

A change in policy by both state and national draft authorities on the troublesome "married men with dependents" question was disclosed last night at a meeting of local Hamilton county draft board members.

Major M. Ray Allison, chief of the classification division of state draft headquarters at Columbus, said the national policy now is to defer service for men with wives and children even though the family is now dependent upon the income of the husband.

His statement was made in reply to a question from the floor what classification would be given a married man with children whose wife has ample income to support the family.

"It is my personal opinion," Major Allison replied, "that, under the regulations, the men should be deferred because of dependents. The regulations make it plain that the Selective Service administration does not wish to break up families where this can be avoided."

A local board member protested that several Hamilton county men with families and private incomes have been inducted or notified to report for induction. He said that at a previous meeting in Cincinnati state authorities "mentioned only economic deepndency as grounds for deferment."

"That is true," Allison said, "but the pendulum has swung the other way now."

Lieut. Col. Chester W. Goble, state draft chief, who was present at the discussion last night, said the state headquarter regrets the changes in policies but it must act on instructions from Washington.

Up and Down the Street

The question of the moment for the Mansfield high school senior class is "Who will read the class prophecy." The prophecy which has been written, doesn't have a reader for tonight's class party at the high scrool. A committee of ten worked on the opus which, since its completion, has undergone a series of buck-passing operations. A large part of the buck-passing seems to be result of buck-fever on the part of the selected readers. At any rate, no one knows who's going to read the prophecy. It's a secret even to Richard Burkholder, class president.

One person that the Friendly House kindergarten graduates missed at their "commencement" exercises last night was Miss Elizabeth Hildum, who left for home in Plain Field, N. J., before the program. Miss Hildum has been a daily volunteer kindergarten worker at Friendly House for 11 years and spends the winters in Mansfield with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. George Tobias, just in order to aid in this work. She was one of the volunteer workers to receive an award given by Friendly House for the first time this year to its volunteer staff.

While staying at a Cleveland hotel last month, the mayor lost an expensive pen. Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the First English Lutheran church, is due for a surprise during his next golf game if the plans of City Auditor Paul Kelley turn out right. Kelley gave a golf ball made of soap to a friend who passed it on to Rev. Swoyer with advice "to clean up his game." The usual experience of any golfer hitting one of the soap balls is to spend a few moments dodging soap chips.

LAUNCH PROBE OF ILL-FATED TEST FLIGHT

FBI Heads Investigation of Four-Motored Ship Built For Great Britain.

(Picture on Page 3)

(By International News Service)

SAN DIEGO—With officials of the Consolidated Aircraft company strongly suspecting sabotage, a six-way investigation was underlaken today into the crash of a huge four-motored Consolidated bomber destined for Britain. Four men died in the crash.

The tragedy occurred when the controls of the plane apparently failed to function properly immediately after the takeoff.

The agencies investigating the crash were the federal bureau of investigation, the San Diego county coroner's office, the U. S. army, Consolidated and British authorities and the civil aeronautics administration.

The ill-fated flight was to have been the last test hop for the ship which, according to company officials, was thoroughly tested last week and found to be in perfect mechanical condition.

"It was one of those things that just 'couldn't happen,'" said a Consolidated spokesman. "The pilot was unable to control the ship after it got into the air.

"This points to the possibility that the controls had been tampered with. If sabotage was responsible for the crash, the guilty persons will be found, for a relentless investigation has been launched."

Federal bureau of investigation agents were on the job shortly after the plane dove into San Diego bay and sped to the beside of the only survivor, Louis McCannon, Woodstock, Ill., member of the bomber's crew. He was critically injured and was taken to a hospital in an unconscious condition.

Those killed were:

William Wheatley, chief test pilot and service manager for Consolidated Aircraft; Alan T. Austen, Wheatley's assistant; Bruce Craig, and William Reiser, engineers.

Issues Last Call For Tickets For War Relief Party

The last call for tickets for the Malabar Carnival, to be staged Saturday night at Malabar Farm, home of Novelist Louis Bromfield, as a British War Relief society benefit, went out today.

Oliver C. Henkel, chairman of ticket sales, announced today that only 94 tickets were still available in Mansfield for the event, while a few more were still available in nearby towns.

Only 1,000 tickets will be sold to the event. Henkel also urged those who have reserved tickets but have not yet picked them up to do so by Friday noon, as no tickets will be held after that hour because of the heavy demand.

Tickets are available in Mansfield at Tawse pharmacy, the Bookshop, Shaw's Marion avenue store and The News-Journal.

Ashland, Galion, Shelby, Loudonville and Mt. Vernon workers have reported a total sale of 230 tickets to date, with a few still unsold in those towns.

OBJECTORS IN MARIETTA CAMP

First Contingent of Draftees Arrive for Training.

MARIETTA —(AP)— Ohio's first contingent of drafted conscientious objectors awoke here with the dawn for 16 hours of toil, prayer, study and entertainment today.

The 44 objectors were called to don their own work clothes at 5:30 a. m., breakfast and report for work on the state's forest nursery at Camp Marietta at 7 a. m. They'll return from work at four, dine at six, and from seven to 9:30 study or participate in some sort of entertainment.

Arriving yesterday by bus and auto, the "C-O's" generally expressed satisfaction with the camp layout.

Most of the first arrivals were farmers and truck drivers from Mennonite settlements in Holmes and Tuscarawas counties.

Lou Gehrig Dies of Rare and Incurable Disease

Sport Podge by Rex Hess

"Break up the Braves," the boys were saying somewhat jovially in the first week of the Ohio State league season.

And now the trend of the fan comment is: "What's the matter with the Braves?

That's how times have changed, and how quickly.

The Braves no longer take a bow,
Things with them are different now.

Errors began creeping into their defensive play, pitchers hit wild streaks, and the punch in the pinch became a thing of the past.

And strangely enough all these things happened after the squad was reduced to the league limit of 15 players. Instead of gaining confidence with the knowledge that their jobs were sure, they suddenly seemed to have lost the drive that had won those jobs.

* * *

"I can't understand it," says Prexy George Satterlee sadly. "They are too good a team to be bouncing around down there in fifth place. I know they're keeping in condition, and are still trying, and still have that hustle that made the fans like 'em at the first of the season.

"Maybe they just got over-confident on that first fast rush of opening week. And maybe the break-up in their schedule caused by all the rain has thrown them off their stride."

If you're a seer, then here's your chance, sir,
To give George Satterlee the answer.

I'm not much worried about the Braves, yet. Even in fifth place they are not so far behind first that a short drive wouldn't put them right up in the running again.

"We've been looking at the best flingers these other clubs have," says Manager Alex Clowson. "We're really feared around the rest of the loop. And we've been getting more than our share of bad breaks. But there'll come a day. We'll get going again."

DECATHLON SET

NEW YORK—(AP)—Akron, O., will be the scene of the National A. A. U. decathlon championship June 21-22.

Walker Supplies Spirit

Helps Feller Register 11th Victory of Year.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—A player generally overlooked in the Cleveland Indians' pennant drive is Gerald Holmes Walker, 32-year-old left fielder whose "college spirit" helped put the club back in first place today.

Sticking in the lineup despite a series of back and leg injuries, Gee-gee has buoyed Cleveland morale and directly or indirectly added many of the team's 30 victories with his dash and enthusiasm.

Yesterday he drove in two runs the first inning to get the Tribe off to a fast start in its 7 to 5 decision over New York.

Bob Feller limited the Yankees to seven hits in pitching his sixth consecutive victory and his 11th of the season. The triumph put the Redskins a game and a half ahead of Chicago, which lost its percentage leadership by dropping a tussle to Washington.

* * *

The Indians now have won three of the last 10 games and Bob has registered every victory. He had pitched 30 scoreless innings up to the second stanza yesterday when Buddy Rosar singled home a run.

Pounding Marius Russo for eight hits and five runs in five innings, the Redskins finally chased him in the sixth when Ken Keltner tripled and Jeff Heath poled his 10th home run of the season. Charley Stanceu and Spurgeon Chandler shut out the Tribesmen the rest of the way.

Two home runs by Tommy Henrich, the Massillon boy who plays right field for New York, produced three of the Yankees' markers. He got his first circuit blow leading off in the fourth and the other in the eighth with Joe DiMaggio on base.

Boston opens a three-game series at the stadium tonight.

It was the talk of the major leagues last year that the Cincinnati Reds won 42 games by one-run margins, and in doing it won the National league pennant and the world championship.

But the way things are going this season, that record may look puny before the finish. It took a total of three runs to return the St. Louis Cardinals and Cleveland Indians to first place in their respective leagues yesterday and that's just a sample of what's been going on.

To date, 21 of the Cardinals' 44 contests have been decided by single runs with the Redbirds winning 15 of them, mostly in the late innings. The Indians have found two runs a more comfortable margin, either winning or losing, but they've had seven one-run decisions in their favor and six against them in 49 games.

The Cards broke their tie with Brooklyn yesterday by beating the Dodgers 5-4.

The world champions turned back the New York Giants 4-3 and took fourth place in the National league. The Boston Red Sox moved a half game ahead of the A's into fourth with a 9-1 triumph over Detroit.

* * *

The White Sox, after reaching the top for the first time since 1921, succumbed 8-3 to Steve Sundra and the seventh-place Washington Senators.

The Phillies aided the Reds' advance when they knocked off the Cubs for the first time this season, 3-2. The Boston Braves stopped the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2-0. The Philadelphia at St. Louis game was rained out.

Mt. Gilead To Stage Matches

National Rifle Event at Perry Cancelled.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS—(AP)—One of the country's most colorful top-flight sports events—the National Rifle matches dropped from the 1941 calendar today with announcement that Camp Perry would not be available for the big three-week cartridge carnival.

* * *

The National Rifle association announced in Washington that the army's 30-caliber division of the classic would be cancelled, due to the national defense program, definitely limiting the 1941 competition to the smallbore and pistol classifications.

As a result, the usual three-week program at the National Guard camp on Lake Erie's shore has been erased for this year at least, and new sites selected for the 22-caliber rifle and hand-gun tournaments.

The smallbore rifle contests have been transferred to the Mount Gilead range of the Ohio Rifle and Pistol association, and will be fired the last week in August. Many of the leaders in the national sports are now in army encampments, but those still in civilian life are expected to take part.

The National Pistol tournament has been shifted to the L. A. Young range in Detroit, where all the usual Camp Perry hand gun events will be run off. Detroit's police team, as usual, is expected to walk off with the majority of the individual and team trophies. The pistol meet also will be held the last week in August.

In connection with the Mount Gilead matches, which will attract shooters from all portions of the country and the Canal Zone, a small arms school will be held. In the past, U. S. army officers have been in charge of the small arms school, offering instruction in the use of pistols, rifles, sub-machine and machine guns, but this year's classes will be under supervision of officials of the National Rifle association.

Detroit will feature a police school in connection with the pistol meet, and hundreds of law enforcement officers from the country's state patrols, city and county departments, as well as several teams from Mexico, are scheduled to attend.

* * *

At Camp Perry, contestants in all classes of competition were housed in army tents, ate army food, and used army equipment, but this year all entrants will be forced to live in hotels, tourist camps or private homes. Regional winners in pistol and smallbore tournaments will have part of their expenses paid by the National association, but non-winners will be "on their own."

The North Central Regional, and Ohio State Rifle, Small-Bore championships also are scheduled at the Mt. Gilead range, July 12-13.

Homers Mark Church Games

St. Johns took the First Lutherans 13 to 8 at Johns Park yesterday while St. Luke's trounced St. Matthew's 18 to 6 at Prospect Park and the Congregationals trampled the First Baptists 21 to 19 in softball tilts of the Church league.

* * *

St. Johns, led by Gross and Uhlich who each smacked a homer, took a 4 to 2 lead in the first inning and stayed on top for the rest of the game.

* * *

St. Luke's had no trouble in defeating St. Matthew's as Lace, on the mound for St. Luke's kept six hits well scattered except in the last inning when a walk, a single, and a home run by Schocker scored three runs after two outs.

The Congregationals played superior ball throughout the game as they took the Baptists 4 to 0 in the first inning and had them 10 to 2 by the third. Home runs were made by Weber for the Baptists and Shelley for the Congregationals.

Umpire's Ruling Spoils Tight Game; Braves Lose

Mansfield Braves dropped another Ohio State league ball game last night at the Fairground, losing to the league-leading Tiffin Mud Hens 5 to 1 while the odor of hamburger and onions from the circus next door floated over the park, and the band played on.

It was a great ball game big Freddy Wolpert, the ex-Cleveland Rosenblum, hurled for the Braves for the space of six stanzas, but an unfortunate ruling by the base arbiter at the start of the seventh threw Freddy off the pace, and Tiffin won the ball game then and there.

With the score tied 1 to 1 for most of the half-dozen frames, Wolpert had allowed only two hits, had whiffed nine, and had given up three passes.

* * *

Bayliss for Tiffin had been almost as good, limiting the Braves to four hits, fanning seven, and issuing two passes.

The fans, and there were more of them than you'd suspect with a circus playing next door, had settled down to a tight ball game when the blow-off came in the seventh.

Snyder, Hen catcher, got a life on Ankrum's overthrow to first, and when he wheeled the initial hassock in a try for second he was caught by First Sacker and Manager Alex Clowson by so far there was no room for argument.

But Umpire Ralph Bulmon ruled that Snyder had merely made his turn after passing first and was returning to the bag in normal fashion when it was apparent to one and all that Snyder had started a dash for second.

"Why," asked Bulmon, "should he want to go to second?"

* * *

This is the sort of silly question likely to upset more experienced twirlers than young Fred, and Wolpert was upset more than a little.

* * *

Bowdler smacked a line drive just to the right of second base that Bob TeStruth snagged, glove high from the ground, on a sensational catch for the first out. But Bayliss, who fanned on his other three trips, punched out a single, and so did King and so did Campau, and two runs were across the platter.

In the eighth Boone led off with a single and Kolos walked. Boone stole third, and then Snyder clouted one high against the green on the scoreboard for a double and two more runs were in.

Wolpert took charge again at this point and retired the next three batters on strikes.

The Hens scored in the first inning on an error and a double by Sander, and the Braves came back with the tying run in the second on a walk to Mangan and a long double to left center by Clowson.

* * *

Tonight Mansfield meets Lima at the Fairground in the first game of the third round of league play. And it's ladies' night, with the fair fans admitted for a service charge of 10 cents each.

GOOD FISHING FOR LAKE ERIE LOOMS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Exceptionally good Lake Erie fish catches in the next five years were forecast today by Dr. T. H. Laglois, head of the fish management and propagation section of the state division of conservation and natural resources.

In a report to conservation commissioners Don Waters, Dr. Laglois said studies at the state Put-in-Bay laboratory showed exceptionally clear water conditions this spring, with a resultant abundance of food for the annual hatch.

Langhurst Has Dodger Offer

Fears Army Draft Will Halt Pro Grid Career.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—A professional football career today beckoned Jimmy Langhurst, star fullback and captain of the 1940 Ohio State university football team.

One of the rain-coated spectators who dodged intermittent showers to watch the Ohio State and California baseball teams play here yesterday was Dr. Jock Bain Sutherland, the amiable Scot whose magic touch catapulted the Pittsburgh Panthers into one of the nation's gridiron powerhouses.

Sutherland, who now tutors the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional Football league, was here to persuade Langhurst, to autograph a Dodger contract.

"We would like very much to have Langhurst with us next fall," Sutherland said as he watched the Buckeye fullback perform in left field for the Ohio State nine.

"Although I have never seen Langhurst play, the reports of our scouts and the praise of the coaches in the Western conference have convinced me that he would prove a valuable man to have around," the Dodger mentor said.

Langhurst said after the game that he had, not signed with the Dodgers but that he had promised to give Sutherland his answer in two weeks and it probably would be yes.

The complicating factor in the situation is the draft. The former Buckeye captain said he stands to be called by the army in three or four months and that would settle his professional football career for the time being.

"The draft cannot help but hurt the game but we'll manage all right," Sutherland said.

The Dodger coach said that two of his best players, Sam Francis of Nebraska and Ben Kish of Pittsburgh, already have been called by the army.

* * *

Sutherland is completely satisfied with his new role in professional football but he added, "you still have to win."

When asked what he thought about the naming of Paul Brown as Ohio State coach, Sutherland said, "I don't think there is anything unusual in hiring a high school coach for a big university job.

"The people who brought him here probably knew what they were doing. I have known many smart high school coaches and Paul Brown is one of them."

'Iron Horse' Loses Two Year Battle

Holder of Continuous Play Record Never Admitted Defeat In Fight

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—Lou Gehrig, the "Iron Horse" of baseball, is dead.

The big, handsome fellow who was a marvel of power and endurance for 14 years as the first baseman of the New York Yankees, died last night at his home in the Bronx. He had been ill for two years from a rare and apparently incurable disease described as hardening of the spinal cord which caused his muscles to shrivel.

The end came 17 days before Lou would have been 38 and wrote finis to a fight with disease that was as courageous as any of his diamond exploits.

Right up until the time he fell into a coma yesterday afternoon, Gehrig never acknowledged he was licked.

* * *

But others knew he was waging a losing fight and when death came his wife and close relatives were gathered at the bedside.

Arrangement were made for funeral services at 9 a. m. (EST) tomorrow at the Christ Episcopal church. The body will be cremated.

Gehrig's place among baseball's immortals was assured a year ago when he was voted into the sport's Hall of Fame. Before he voluntarily withdrew from the Yankee lineup May 2, 1939, at Detroit, he set a never-approached record of playing in 2,130 consecutive championship games, 34 world series contests and countless exhibitions.

He started his streak as a pinchhitter on June 1, 1925. The next day he replaced Wally Pipp at first base and never missed a game for 14 years.

He twice was named the most valuable player in the American league, led it in batting with .363 in 1934, set a major league record for batting in more than 100 runs a year for 13 years, set the American league mark of 184 runs batted in in 1931, hit a home run with the bases loaded 23 different times and once hit four homers in one game—feats never equalled.

The insidious illness that struck out Gehrig was diagnosed as "amyotrophic lateral sclerosis." It was not until he went to Mayo clinic at Rochester, Minn., two years ago this month that he knew anything was wrong physically. There he was told that he never could play baseball again and that he would have to have an injection in his back every day for what proved to be the remainder of his life. Even so he continued cheerful and hopefully remained with the ball club, in uniform, for the remainder of the 1939 season. He sat in a corner of the dugout and on special occasions limped out with his team's lineup for the umpires.

After the world series that fall, Mayor F. H. La Guardia offered him a 10-year post on the city parole commission at a salary of $5,700, a modest stipend for a man who made in the neighborhood of $400,000 in his years on the diamond and reached a peak of $39,000, exclusive of world series and other extras, in 1938.

Gehrig accepted immediately and was sworn in the following January. His health grew worse, even though he gave each bit of ground grudgingly.

* * *

He told President Edward G. Barrow of the Yankees on Friday night, "I'm sure I'm going to beat this."

When Barrow was summoned last night Gehrig was dead.

As soon as the news was known, expressions of sorrow came from the great and small of baseball throughout the country.

Babe Ruth, Gehrig's teammate for many years, visited the home and said: "He was just a grand guy."

Members of the Yankees, by coincidence arriving in Detroit where Gehrig had first been taken from them, were shocked to learn of his death.

Manager Joe McCarthy said "What can I say? I am at a loss for words."

The player to whom the death probably was felt more keenly was Bill Dickey, veteran catcher who had been Gehrig's confidant and roommate on road trips for many years. "I feel like it was one of my own family passing," he said.

Wants Billy Hot For Joe

Conn's Pilot Would Cut Formalities.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn, shatters pugilistic precedent today when he goes before the boxing commission with four requests to enable the fighter to come into the ring "red hot" for his heavyweight title battle with Joe Louis.

Ray's pronouncement came while Conn entered his second day of training for the bout at the Polo grounds on June 18. Categorically speaking, his argument should sound something like this:

(1)—Pittsburgh Billy should be permitted to remain in his dressing room until all the prefight formalities have been completed.

(2)—The gloves should be laced on in the dressing room rather than in the ring.

(3)—Both fighters should be given thorough instructions at the weigh-in regarding rules governing the fight, instead of in mid-ring just before the bell.

(4)—The battle should begin as soon as Conn climbs into the ring.

Ray explains his unusual ideas this way: "Billy is a slow starter. He doesn't warm up until around the fifth or sixth round. Then he's hell-on-wheels. We're going to have him shadow-box about eight rounds in the dressing room to get him hot for this fight.

"That why we want all that prefight stuff eliminated. It's no use letting Conn cool off in his corner while a bunch of fighters are being introduced, announcements are being made and gloves tied on."

Salesbook Wins Opening Game

SHELBY—Shelby Salesbook Co. team defeated the Cycle Co. 7 to 6 in the opening game of the Shelby Softball league last night at municipal water company diamond.

* * *

A home run by Frank Stevens, jr., in the last half of the ninth brought in the tieing run for Salesbook and Stevens crossed the plate a few minutes later to win the game.

* * *

The Cycle Co. took an early lead and held it throughout the game until the winning run was scored by Stevens.

Wolfe allowed the Salesbook Co. team only seven hits, while Laubie, pitching for the Salesbook Co., allowed the Cycle team 14 hits.

SPORTS GOSSIP

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK — (The Special News Service)—Arthur Donovan was all set to referee Lou Nova-Jim Robinson Friday night in Minneapolis. But the papers put on the old blast and Promoter Tommy O'Loughlin changed his mind quicker than it takes to say so, here . . . Billy Conn won't get far with his petition to have a Pittsburgh-made glove used in his Yankee Stadium title fight with Joe Louis . . . Hard to believe, but Buck Newsom has failed to last nine innings in 10 of his 11 starts this year.

OVERHEARD

A guy walked into a Brooklyn hotel where several of the Dodgers stop and inquired of the clerk, "What did them bums do today?"

Kirby Higbe, playing a juke box nearby, replied, "We won."

BUSY MAN'S NEWSPAPER

Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Crackers, is so high on his prize youngsters, Rene Cortes, Willard Marshall and Connie Ryan, that he says he doubts if even the Yanks could raise enough cabbage to buy all three—but may get one. (We heard that Scout Johnny Nee just about had closed for the whole gang) . . . Detroit would like to match Outfielder Pat Mullin in a foot race with Washington's George Case, the American League's modern Ty Cobb.

SPORTS COCKTAIL

San Jose State college has found a way to get some good out of the soon-to-leave footballers. Seven weeks of spring drills came to a close with a regulation game between the "home guards" (those players sure to return) and the "draftees," who are not at all sure about it . . . Bucky Harris slapped a $25 fine on Buddy Lewis the other day for not running out a bunt . . . Staretor, the big surprise of the Kentucky Derby, isn't coming back east this season, but will go in for the big purses at Hollywood Park and other California hoss tracks.

John Kieran, New York Times: "The noted pitching staff of the Indians took a hammering over a recent stretch, but Manager Peckinpaugh still has a Feller when he needs a friend."

BUCK NINE WINS

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Three hits and two walks gave Ohio State university's baseball team three runs in the third inning and led to a 4-1 victory over the university of California here yesterday.

WIGGLER PAYS $126.60 AT CANTON MEETING

CANTON —(AP)— The long shot players had something to shoot at today in the harness racing meet at the Stark county fairgrounds.

Certain, a 60 to 1 brown gelding, raced home first last night in the 9-16 mile test for $ and 4-year-old maidens in 1:11½ to pay a record $126.60.

Toledo Tightens Association Race

(By Associated Press)

The Toledo Mudhens did their bit last night to tighten up the American Association's first division.

* * *

Milt Byrnes' 11th inning homer gave the Hens a 5-4 victory over the front-running Kansas City Blues, as all other games were rained out.

* * *

The loss left the Blues virtually tied with Minneapolis for the top spot, Columbus trailing this pair by only two and a half games. A half game further back is Louisville in fourth place, only two games ahead of Toledo.

Only Two Crack Par In Tourney

YOUNGTOWN—(AP)—Only two golfers from a powerful collection of Ohio and Pennsylvania professionals cracked par at the Mahoning Country club in a tune-up for the $5,000 Mahoning Valley open June 13-15.

* * *

In best-ball competition over the Par-72 layout yesterday Bill Barbour and Johnny Malutic of Cleveland paired to win with 32-33—65.

* * *

Jack Thompson of Youngstown and Malutic were the sharpshooters who cracked regulation figures, Thompson carding a 70 and the Clevelander 71. Andy Velican of Warren had a 73.

WORMS MAY BE A REASON

Why Your Child Can't Gain Weight

Face the facts: It's easy for anybody, anywhere, to "catch" roundworms. And if the awful creatures are living and growing inside your child, that may be why the youngster is pale, thin, nervous. Other signs of worms are itching nose or seat, uneasy stomach, fingernail biting.

Act now! Drive out roundworms before they can "get set" and cause trouble! Use Jayne's Vermifuge—America's best known proprietary worm medicine — scientifically tested and proved by over a century of use, in millions of cases. Jayne's expels stubborn worms, yet acts very gently. If there are no worms, it works merely as a mild laxative. Insist on Jayne's Vermifuge.

THAT WAS ODD-- DR. THERON ASKING IF BILL HAD EVER HAD A BAD BUMP WHEN HE WAS A LITTLE BOY---
YES--I'D ALMOST FORGOTTEN ABOUT IT MYSELF-
6-3-41
SO HAD I, BESS-- IT WAS JUST A BAD BRUISE- BUT HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE DR. THERON EVER FOUND OUT ABOUT IT?
WHY, BERT, I CAN'T IMAGINE---IT WAS QUITE A BAD BUMP AT THE TIME, OF COURSE-
BUT BILL WAS ONLY A BABY---IT WAS YEARS AGO- HE GOT OVER IT- HA! HA! I REMEMBER YOU SAID WE SHOULD CALL A DOCTOR-
WELL, BILL CRIED SO--AND THEN HE WAS SO DROWSY FOR DAYS- DON'T YOU REMEMBER?
OH, BILL WAS TOO MUCH OF A LITTLE MAN TO LET A WHACK ON THE HEAD WITH A FLAT IRON BOTHER HIM-
OH, I SUPPOSE IT WAS ALL RIGHT--HE DID GET OVER IT-- BUT I STILL REMEMBER HOW IT WORRIED ME, AT THE TIME-

COFFEE SOAP

Swiss to Produce Oil and Soap From Coffee Grounds.

BASEL, Switzerland—(AP)—Production of lubricating oil and soap fat from coffee grounds will be one of Switzerland's next moves to combat wartime scarcity. Basel has a dump pile of grounds already weighing 80 tons.

School children will catch "June-bugs" (beetles) this year, to be used as food for Swiss chickens and ducks, also on rations.

TRADERS TURN INTEREST TO CONTROL ACTS

Stock Leaders Take Short Step Forward on Slow Market Dealings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Leading stocks took a short step forward in today's market but numerous issues were at a standstill.

The list inclined to duplicated yesterday's pattern to a considerable extent. Dealings were slow throughout.

Wall Street interest centered mainly on spreading governmental controls and, pending definite indications to how many corporations would fare under broadening price restrictions and priorities, brokers aid, the disposition of most customers was to keep commitments light. War news still was far from cheerful for financial quarters.

Market analysts saw further proof of the industrial upswing in the figures of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended May 28 disclosing another substantial increase in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture.

The expansion in the lending item during the latest week amounted to $34,000,000 and was the fifth consecutive weekly rise. The banks also reported demand reposits adjusted jumped $46,000,000 to a peak of $24,311,000,000.

ANNOUNCING SATURDAY NIGHT CLOSING

Decision of a majority of Mansfield stores to close Saturday evenings at 6 o'clock is a natural one. Operation and employment trends in all lines have for many years been in the direction of shorter work weeks and longer week-end holidays. Saturday night trade has been influenced by these trends and now it becomes possible to adopt the Saturday Night closing practice of most Ohio cities in Mansfield for at least the summer months.

Closing will permit store employes to be with their families and in their homes Saturday evenings.

The Saturday Night closing will have its advantages for customers of Mansfield Stores. Lessening the working hours on Saturdays will permit full operation on the other business days of the week. There will be no summertime half-holidays and regular business hours of 9 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. will prevail daily. Saturdays until 6 P. M.
